

The Divine Plan

Jami Lin

When I asked my intuition how to close the anthology, the answer was the same as with Earth Design: The Added Dimension, which also concludes with “The Divine Plan.”

Life Is Your Divine Plan By Design.

It is a celebration that unfolds when you watch the magical coincidences of your daily experience. Whatever your destiny, Feng Shui and its spiritual energy can be your vessel for life’s abundance.

As a slice of life, the magic and lessons I learned when working on the anthology were no different. In the early stages, very few of the contributors advised me on what subject they chose to write. As the articles started to flow, there was little duplication. Even similar articles provided unique information that added to the anthology’s cohesion. Even without a specific plan, through their desire, their specific expertise, and hard work, each author magically filled in an integral piece of the puzzle.

At the final hour, several practitioners who had previously said, “no thank you,” suddenly added their contribution, which I knew would provide you with great information. Just in time... perfect time!

424 Contemporary Earth Design: A Feng Shui Anthology

The most interesting coincidences magically happened on the same day: Professor Lin Yun's foreword and Sarah Rossbach's introduction.

Professor had understandably asked to see the text before he wrote the foreword. The day after it was sent to him, the Temple called to say the foreword was currently being translated. Even though Professor previously had a table of contents, and yes he is an amazing individual, how did he write it so fast?

Could it be that Lin Yun connected to the anthology on the transcendental level? Did he feel the anthology's energy on the level of spirit connected by the earth meridians, on the web spun by the mythological goddess Spider Woman, or in Carl Jung's collective unconscious?

In the preface, I suggested that somehow "I was chosen" to facilitate this project. Did professor somehow know about my daydream? Did he plant the seed? In the spiritual realm, did he ask me to do it? After all, like all magical coincidences, it was just days after I performed his ceremony of tracing the nine star path¹ on my home while I asked "what should I do now," that I knew to start this anthology.

Wherever it came from, I was supposed to create a vessel in which practitioners could share their spirit, an anthology about expansion, a universal network, and how Feng Shui can make the planet a better place through the vessel of the authors' love.

A few hours after I heard from the Temple, the phone rang. It was Sarah, my first teacher, who had introduced me to the added dimension of design. After I expressed my appreciation, we giggled and shared life stories. She said she would try to write an introduction between juggling her children and the new book she was working on. More magic.

Watch the magical coincidences of your day. Did the phone ring with the person you were thinking about on the other end of the line? How did you connect with them in that instant? What happened yesterday that magically lead you to plant the seeds to create the magic of today?

When you design your vessel to support you, your primary vessel, your essence, you ride the wave of joy, success, and wonder.

Always take time to recognize and honor this magic.

You can make a difference in global harmony merely by happily living your dream.

Again, I lovingly thank my Feng Shui friends, Maggie for her help, love, and support during every phase, editors, family, and most of all my very understanding husband Joel, for without them, we could not have shared this anthology with you.
